 intent. . . . — IV xi. 9.

And now the Power of Good held victory,
 one Unutterable power, which shielded us, a power Which dawning thro' the rent soul;
 And with great power it forth led me
 A power which comes and goes like dream,
 A power to infect and to infect, driven within him, by some secret power,
 If then my words had power,
 a power as wide As is the world it wasted,
 There is a Power, a Love, a Joy,

(3) as a supernatural agency.
 Spreading itself wherever that Power may move. Adonais, XLII. 6.
 One power, one will, Calderson, I. 196.
 His attributes may be distinguished, one Sovereign power.

 His will whose will is power.
 that the proud Power of Evil.
 Like omniscient power which he O, faith in God! O, power on earth!
 rich Power, revered Divinity.
 the glorious Power with azure eyes,
 The Son of Saturn with this glorious Power
 The awful shadow of some unseen Power
 What Power delights to torture us?
 One Power of many shapes which none may know,
 Which thy breath kindled, P. of holiest name!
 one Power, to which supreme control that dark power which brings Evil, has some immortal power Such purposes? or what mute Power may give terrific power, I come away.
 Cursing the power that ne'er made naught in vain.
 Is it then thine, Almighty Power, she cries,
 as the Power divine Which then lalled all things, but power from worst producing worse,
 or of the power unknown!
 the abode Of that power which is the glass
 It matters not: for the same power made all,
 Before the Power that wields and kindles them.
 Nor any power above or under Cruel was the power which called You,
 He yet defies the deepest power of Hell.
 Fit throne for such a Power! Magnificent!
 We have felt the wand of Power, and leap-peace! A mighty Power, which is as darkness, Hath then the gloomy Power
 all-sufficing Power, Necessary!
 the power That led us forth at this lone hour

(4) influence, capability of influencing, ability to control.
 the cause of this new power Calderson, III. 30.
 what poisonous power Ye use against me—Thought is not in my power.
 with such power Compelling thee
 It were not free if thou hadst power
 If my power drags thee onward?
 preserves, Like a strong prison, the soul within my power.

Could steal the power to wind thee in their wiles.
 In thy dark eyes a power like light doth lie.
 When vanquished by the Bacchic p, he sleeps,
 And things divine are subject to her power.
 That ministering on the solar power.
 The Heaven whose course follows your power and art,

To have known their p stood me in little stead, raging, weave a chain of power, power and wit Of looks and words
 Love its power to give and bear!
 Thy words Have power on me I see—
 That you alive defend from magic power,
 The power of unremediated song?
 has given Thy songs such power?
 This glory and power thou dost from Jove inherit.
 Thus let thy power,
 That work of subtlest power, divine and rare;
 The adamantine armour of thy power,
 Unconscious of the power thro' which she wrought
 She mourned that grace and power were thrown
 The tyrants send their armed slaves to quell Her power—

whose power their lives had sought to spare.
 Which once made all things subject to its p. thoughts which smother Cold Evil's power, to great Nature's sacred power He bent,
 The power which has been mine to frame
 That gold should lose its power, and throes their glory?

Whose wand of power is hope
 After the touch, whose p had braided Such grace,
 The still and solemn power of many nights,
 Thou supreme Goddess! by whose power divine and the power divine Of mighty poesy
 O, summer eve! with power divine
 Which wrapt me in its all-dissolving power,
 A guiding power directs the chariot's prow
 a power Which doth array thy sphere;
 Borne beside thee by a power
 Love, from its awful throne of patient power
 The signet of its all-enveloping power
 That there attendant on the solar power for evening, And the power it's glimpses bring nor power, nor love, nor leisure.

 I do adjure thy power and thee
 To which the enchantment of her father's power began To turn the light and dew by inward pow.

(5) a person or body invested with control or authority.
 If the power that raised thee here
 The heavy fragments of the power which fell Till Power, as envying her this only joy, a child of fortune and of power,
 A bloodier power than ruled thy ruins
 there was a Power in this sweet place, with the living form Of this embodied Power,
 (6) sway, authority, dominion.

In sight to weaken the paternal power,
 Should mock with gold, opinion law and power?
 She fears that power is as a beast
 Authority, and power, and hoary hair
 God in my witness that this weight of power, should fence itself inviolably With power;
 that height of power Where now they sit, art thou who wields her power Tamer than they?
 and deny The apostolic power with power to loose and bind, Gives thee large power in his unquiet realm.
 With amplest power to quench in fire and blood,
 That will lend power, and power bring gold.
 Gold must give power, or I Were an invader of the royal power, power's poor dupes and victims yet have never
 Or seek some slave of power and gold,
 Custom, and Power, and Power thou spurnest
 When fenced by power and master of the world.
 When in his hour of pomp and power of the world.
 For men of power provides thus well,
 Yet dare not stain with wealth or power
 Famine, murder, hell and power
 By thought, as I by power.
 how the full tide of power Ebbs to its depths.
 Wakes Power lulled in her savage lair:
 thy power both gives and takes away!
 The path to power is steep and rough,
 We know that we have power over ourselves
 And spurned at peace, and power, and fame;
 Yet flattering power had given its ministers
 Have stamped the sign of power—
 And that his power hath past away, doth know—from human power the reverend veil Was torn,
 Thy throne of power, almighty as thou wert,
 Girt by its hell of power,
 Its names are: each a sign which maketh holy All power.

 aye, the ghost, the dream, the shade Of power— whose will has power when all beaute is gone.
 The Tyrant knew his power was gone,
 the power Of Kings and Priests, to less Than ye conceive of power,
 All power and faith must pass
 That sand on which thy crumbling p is built—Ambition, power, and avarice,
 Wing'd with the power of some ruthless king,
 For his cursed p, unhalloved arms to wield—pride, and power they have overthrown:
 For fangless Power grown tame and mild

Those whom nor power, nor lying faith, nor toil, O'er all things but thyself I gave thee power.
 Thou knowest not the period of Jove's power?
 I laugh your power, and who you sent you here,
 Filling the seat of power,
 The birthright of their being, knowledge, power,
 To defy Power, which seems omnipotent;
 the trembling judge, Who, clothed in venal pow.
Power, like a desolating pestilence,
 Thy throne of power unappealable:
 decked in wealth, Honour and power,
 Have crept by flattery to the seats of power, cringe Before the mockeries of earthly power.
 the power That grinds them to the dust of misery.
 unrestrained but by the arm of power, from power's avenging hand, he takes deadly power Has fixed its seal.
 Or countless partners of his power divide his throne, Gift as it was with power.
 Had raised him to his eminence in power.
 Of weak, unstable and precarious power;
 Or he was battered for the fame of power,
 and Power doth give To such pale tyrants.
 And stood at the throne of armed power.
 If he seeks power, power is enthroned
 Those who would sit near power must toil;
 Grey Power was seated Safely
 When the stern fates had power all those who had grown old in power
 how power and will in opposition
 Their power was given But to destroy,
 To re-assume the delegated power,

(7) force, strength.
 In bands of union, which no power may sever:
 Secure in human power we have defied defying The power of light in vain, Since withering pain no power pangs whence they Drew the power which is their prey.

the city with all its shops, Shore, n. A. Lit. (1) the land adjacent to the sea, large rivers or lakes.
upon the lone Chorasman shore He paused,
A little shallop floating near the shore
the wind Swept strongly from the shore, Beside the grassy s. Of the small stream he went ;
Or like the sea on a northern shore,
Beneath the Ortygian shore :— like the white shore Of Albion, free no more inhabit. On this wild shore, their solitary caves, How touched you not at your paternal shore ?
row with double strokes from this dread shore.
I go towards the shore
I will descend upon the shore, respond In whispers from the shore :—
To the shore of the immeasurable sea, like a toil-worn labourer leaps to shore,
on an imagined shore,
the winds wandering along the shore
Or linger, where the pebble-paven shore,
Till he pass the gloomy shore,
Both have railed from shore to shore,
Put off gaily from shore !—
By the low s. on which the loud sea laughed, and this shore More barren than its billows ;
Which lay betwixt the city and the shore
the waves that meet Near to the shore,
And to the shore I went to muse and weep ;
Like meteors on a river's grassy shore,
For by the desolated shore,
And then the night-wind steaming from the shore, dark shore of Ocean's curved flood,
As by the shore of the tempestuous sea
The hollow shore its thousand echoes cast on the shore The dead and putrid fish sweep in whirlwinds from the shore,
In fierceest tumult from the rocking shore,
That bade me recline on the shore ;
The pure forest on bleak Chiass's shore,
On thy wild and winding shore
For the high price lost on Philippi's shore :—
They found all vanished from the shore :

 as she leaped in passion's silence
 the silence of her eloquent smile,
 Its delicate brief touch in silence weaves gazed In patient silence.
 There is silence in the spaces Made us keep silence—thus and thus—Though silence is a hell to us.
 Crouch then in silence.
 charm To silence the unenvying nightingale,
 to the meal Of silence, grankir, and excess,
 Now, to the scene I shew, in silence turn,
 Henry, who knelt in silence by her couch, in silence then they took the way
 Passionless calm and silence unreprieved.
 (3) stillness, calmness, peace.
 In eloquent silence through the depths of space
 And from all sounds, all silence "
 And in that silence, and in my despair,
 Harmonizing silence without a sound,
 the tone Unheard but in the silence of his blood, Killing the silence,
 How calm it was—the silence there
 A heaven of sacred silence, in silence lay On the still waters—
 Within whose happy silence, thus embraced
 That starry night, with its clear silence.
 And the few sounds . . . Made s more profound some deep lake, whose silence them awaits,
 The sleepless silence did it call Laone
 Which from brief silence bursting,
 In tones whose sweetness silence did prolong,
 Came on us, as we sat in silence there,
 and there was silence wide and lone.
 Silence and solitude were vacancy?
 re-echoed solemnly, Till silence became music?
 Dissonant threats kill Silence far away, Whose changeless paths thro' Heaven's deep silence lay
 Where silence undisturbed might walk alone,
 The lovely silence of the unfatigued man,
Silence and twilight, unbelieved of men,
 Obeyest in silence their sweet solemn spells,
 Folded in cells of crystal silence there;
 (4) a deadly stillness, absence of all life.
 to-morrow, worms In silence and in darkness in silence flow Thro' the vast world,
 My mansion is damp, cold silence is there,
 Dares dispute with grim s, the empire of Death.
 And silence, and a sense that luts the hair made the solemn silence seem More still—
 A far whisper—Terrible silence.
 as s lone and drear, More horrible than famine:
 the mariner in fear Feels s sunk upon his heart—thro' the green silence of the main,
 like the silence of a tempest's birth,
 in the hot silence of the air;
 And in the silence of that expectation, the silence of a long despair,
 such silence through the host,
 Bursts on that awful silence;
 Pausing in breathless silence.
 The frightful silence of that altered mood,
 Because the crystal silence of the air continuous, vast, Awful as silence.
 All is deep silence, like the fearful calm.
 (5) non-interference, abstention.
 Has whispered silence to his Holiness:
 Or with my silence sanction tyranny,
 Can the directors of the storm in powerless s lie?
 (6) reticence, concealment of purpose.
 My silence, and whatever else is mine,
 much horrible need For deepest silence,
 (7) extinction, nothingness.
 Trampling to silence their loud hopes and fears,
Silence, intery, commanding or begging for silence.
Silence now! Ye know the close device—
Silence, v. tr. stop from speaking.
 Seize, silence him!
Silence those mutineers—that drunken crew,
 Silent*, s. attendants on Silenus.
 The Silenti, and Sylvana, and Fauna,
 Silent*, adj. (1) noiseless.
 As silent lightning leaves the starless night!

The urns of the silent snow,
 Descends in silent power:
 Went creeping through the day with silent feet,
 Through the grass with silent gliding.
Silent as night, in night;
 is multiplied With silent growth with Custom's hydra brood, Wage silent war;
 to keep Their silent watch—and the swift stroke Of silent rowers
 The flames grow silent—
 Which, though silent to the ear,
 Had not then silent Fear and fans with silent wing The tender hopes that nations fell Beneath his silent footstep.
 Famine's faint groan, and penury's silent tear,
 Came to my knees with silent breath,
 And the silent motions of passing death,
 a chariot on the silent storm
 As veil by veil the silent splendour drops
 (2) mute, speechless.
Silent with explosion of the song, Silent alone amid an Heaven of Song, and silent death exposed.
 An image, silent, cold, and motionless
 For the weary winds are silent, the silent tongue of steel Spraks thus—felt my wife insult with silent scorn in his silent rage His lips grew white Nay we are silent, and we chaw the air.
 As in silent multitudes
 Poor Ariel sends this silent token Coy, unwillig, silent bride, what secret fight . . . Waged thro' that s throng;
 Among the s millions who did lie In innocent sleep, but blind And silent, as a breathing corpse those tones divine Were silent as she past;
 swift below, silent and stark they sat they became silent, and they stood and died in silent pain.
 and they A space stood silent,
 In silent anguish, on her husband's bier!
 Wild, not taught, his silent time away.
 Pressed into light by silent misery,
 The birds are silent, hanging down their heads,
 Were as silent as ever old Tmolus was,
 Were silent with love,
 there was a silent chasm
 Were now a silent multitude;
 shook With spasms of silent passion;
 And silent those sweet lips,
 centinels, in stern and silent ranks,
 The universe, In nature's silent eloquence,
 In silent eloquence unfold its store Silent they sat
 But I sat silent and alone,
 Beside my path, as silent as a ghost;
 (3) perfectly quiet, free from noise, calm, undisturbed.
 In lone and silent hours,
 But, undulating floods, and silent well,
 one silent nook Was there.
 Whose sacred silent air owns yet no echo
 Its broad and silent mirror gave to view and the slow, silent night is measured
 And the plains that silent he Underneath, had borne To that silent isle,
 What! I do not the silent hours Beckon thee
 This crowd is safer than the silent wood,
 When you die, the silent Moon,
 With all the silent or tempestuous workings
 On the dark, the silent stream—
 And smiled upon the silent sea,
 To the silent wilderness
 As still as in the silent deep
 A thrilling silent life,
 And then, the town is silent
 when the calm sea was bright With silent stars, Like clouds inwoven in the silent sky, overhead Silent Arcturus shines—Hung silent and serene—of that azure sea a silent refuge make.
 She left me at the silent time Disputes her silent reign.
 envelope once this silent snow!
Silent, liquid, and serene:
 When work is none in the bright silent air?
 Pierce with song heaven's silent light,
 This silent spot tradition old
 Helen came To this lone silent spot,
 That mingle in the silent sky
 Cleave with their dark green cones the silent skies, Disencumbered of their silent sleep,
 as April rain On silens leaves,
 With cold and silent rest.
 Make a green space among the silent bowers,
 (4) still momentarily.
 the thunders made silent around.

tremulous and sof and bright Prom. 111. iii. 72.
Lining it with a sof yet glowing light :
Intense, yet sof, the rocks and woods around ;
like starbeams, sof, yet strong,
When some sof cloud vanishes into rain,
Than the stars' sof light,
And around them the sof stream did glide
If I look on Spring's sof heaven,— or the sof shadows of the trees ;
like a sof cloud in April's bosom

(3) kindly, pleasant in expression.
Whose sof smiles to his dark and night-like eyes
The fire of those sof orbs has ceased to burn, the light of a sof starlight smile,
When those s. eyes of scarcely conscious thought,
When mid sof looks of pity, there would dart victims brought—sof looks and speeches meet.
thy dark eyes threw Their sof persuasion on my brain,
Their sof smiles light the air like a star's fire.
arrayed in the sof light of his own smiles,
How its sof smiles attract the soul !
Of smiles whose lustre bright and sof
With sof clear fire, — to see, Thy sof eyes gazing tenderly, her sof smiles shone afar,

(4) of sound, gentle, low, pleasing to the ear, while one, with sof enamoured breath,
ever angling, In murmurs as sof as sleep ;
O'ershadowing it with sof and lulling wings,
Thy harpings, and thy song are sof as love
Made music wild and sof,
Her accents sof and sweet the pausing air
but yet more sof and fair,
Music, when sof voices die, Vibrates
Of whose sof voice the air expectant seems—
And music sof, and mild, free, gentle voices, among the fresh leaves, sof music,
and oft I had awakened music s. Amid its wires :
To low sof notes now changed and dwindled,
Of music so delicate, sof, and intense,
The City's voice itself is sof like Solitude's.
I heard alone on the air's sof stream
Or the sof note in which his dear lament
Your breath is like sof music
Sof melodies, as sweet as April rain

But sof and fragrant is the faded blossom,
With flowers as sof as thoughts of budding love ;
They are sof, but chill and dead ;
To the sof flower beneath our feet,
and the thick tress Of her sof hair Shedding sof dews from her æthereal wings ;
Our young lone's sof and milky arms which, from his sof and flowing limbs,
May I then hide my eyes in thy sof arms,
And your wings are sof and swift as thought,
and sof moths that kiss
Those sof limbs of thine,
A sof hand issued from the veil of fire,

(6) agreeable, tender, pleasant to the imagination or mind.
signs of Love's sof victories ;
tells the same sof tale
Sof as an Incarnation of the Sun,
And the sof dreams of the morn,
Sof as love, and calm as death,
In Venus Jove did sof desire awaken, since thine eye kindled With sof fire under mine, Sof and delightful thoughts did rest
A joy less sof, but more profound and strong and ever in sof dreams of future love
And felt a s. delight from what their spirits shook
And if any sof passion be near,
More fair and sof as man grows wise and kind,
Like the sof waving wings of noonday dreams,
As in the sof and sweet eclipse,
And finds torn the sof ties to affection so dear faint With the sof burthen of intensest bliss ;

(7) mild, gentle, kindly.
Is it so sof a questioner, poured upon my heart, a s. and thrilling sadness
And did with sof attraction ever draw sof reproach that was most thrilling kind

- raging over My tranquil soul,
my soul was deeply laden,
 body and soul, Tyrant and slave,
my soul communion knew;
 Hymns which my soul had woven to Freedom,
 flings On the entangled soul's aspiring wings, Sweet brother of my soul! can I disem-sent Tanless resolve . . . Into my soul— the cavern dreary and forlorn Of the riven soul,
 And to my inmost soul his soothing looks he sent.
 Who alked his thirsting soul as from a well Poured forth her inmost soul:
 two restless frames in one reposing soul?
 Which the soul dreams or knows,
 Which dawned thro' the rent soul;
 Watching the shade from his own soul upthrown all that brings Man's free-born soul
 Reproach not thine own soul, but know thyself, is the truth Within your soul?
 Shewed that my soul was quivering
 the hopes and fears From every man soul, that his soul on its revenge might look,
 which pierced like ice thro' every soul.
 fed My soul with their own joy . . .
 Tumult was in the soul of all . . .
 Till on my passive soul there seemed O let a father's curse be on thy soul,
 Each energy of soul surviving
 Then o'er this ruin'd soul let spirits of hell,
 I'm dead, and lingers yet my soul behind.
 My rapt soul dwelt upon the ties that bind
 But a heavenly sleep . . . Pervaded my soul, Congenial minds will seek their kindred soul, te Thy soul, O Charlotte, a despot's haughty soul;
 Oh! you suck my soul away;
 And streams of rapture drown my soul.
 'Tis not heard by the ear, but is felt in the s.
 Of a man who has sold his soul to hell . . .
 To sit and curb the soul's mute rage
 My soul weeps healing rain, marble knew The sculptor's fearless soul—
 Which bound thy lovely soul to bliss?
 'Tis to be a slave in soul
 Visit the soul in sleep, Pressed into light . . . Hath soul's imperishable energy . . .
 When first her soul began indeed to grieve:
 A sorrow o'er her aged soul did fling,
 Which ruled his sinews and coerced his soul law loves to read the poor man's soul
 shook The listening soul in my suspended blood;
 My soul spurned the chains of its dismay,
 His soul may stream over the tyrant's head;
 the judgement throne Of its own aweless soul,
 The shadows of my soul upon mankind,
 The body of a double soul,
 Like the soul before it is Born a Low-time in soul,
 And swore in his soul a great oath then,
 And set his soul on fire.
 Now Peter ran to seed in soul
 And coolly to his own soul said:—
 My dearest Soul, will then make merry,
 And so his Soul would not be gay,
 The very life and soul of Peter—
 To Peter's soul the spell is bound—
 Had left within his soul their dark unrest:
 His soul had wedded wisdom, Liberal he was of soul,
 his soul, like Vesper's serene beam
 But through the soul's abyss,
 Struck body and soul as with a mortal blight,
 Loves then the shade of his own soul,
 How will thy soul, cloven to its depth bend thy soul in prayer, we can obscure not The soul which burns
 The nights with which thou tortest girl my soul
 Which thro' the deep and labyrinthine soul,
 The shadow of that soul by which I live,
 that I may read his written soul!
 As mine own soul would answer, did it know How its soft smiles attract the soul!
 till grief cast Eclipse upon the soul
 My soul is in an enchanted boat,
 The soul of man, . . . Yet burns towards heaven
 Those better ashes, a soul self-consumed,
 Which pierce the sense, and live within the soul,
 Man, one harmonious soul of many a soul,
 When soul meets soul on lovers' lips
 Sheltered by the warm embrace Of thy soul
 Beneath whose looks did my reviving soul
 Seized on her sinless soul?
Soul of Ianthe! thou, judged alone worthy Soul of Ianthe! Awake! arise!
Soul—ten arose Ianthe's Soul;
 a night Of wonder to behold the body and soul.
 I am a soul, A free, a disembodied soul, happy Soul, Ascend the car with me!
 The Fairy and the Soul proceeded;
 an earthly soul Fears to attempt the conquest.
 a soul that claims its kindred with eternity.

- the human soul Requires no other heaven . . .
 Which restless time prepares For every living s. a gilded chain That binds his soul to abjection;
 shed One drop of balm upon my withered soul.
 His soul asserts not its humanity?
 The man Of virtuous soul commands not . . .
 A new created sense within his soul . . .
 to lift Her soul above this sphere of earthliness;
 some soul bursts from the frame of clay his soul Blasted with withering curses;
Soul is not more polluted than the beams
 Man is of soul and body,
 Which poisoned body and soul,
 Is bartered for the poison of his soul;
 To move the deep stagnation of his soul—
 to yield his elevated soul To tyranny or falsehood, bitterness of soul, Fining regrets,
 Which ne'er could rack an everlasting soul,
 to glut Thy misery-thriving soul,
 and my soul procure Wherever to sate
 Of truth and freedom his malignant soul.
 But my soul, From sight and sense Concordant with the life-strings of the soul;
 sees The chosen of his soul in happiness,
 The sacred sympathies of soul and sense,
 Courage of soul, that dreaded not a name,
 Before the naked soul has found its home,
 Had they resigned to one another Body and soul.
 and follow His soul to it's home
 And watch the growing soul
 In my lost soul's abandoned night, Nor my vexed soul had leisure yet for he who yet Is my soul's soul, once said:
 to live My soul disclaimed not . . .
 Though my soul with grief is grey and old.
 To my own soul its self-consuming treasure.
 His soul seemed hovering in his eyes,
 For which, though his soul must roasted be,
 What the knut soul that pleading and pale
 One soul of interwoven flame,
 And in my soul I dared to say,
 I lived and saw, and the gathering soul
 Yes, 'twas his soul that did inspire Sounds,
 For through that trance my soul had well
 The Monk call'd on God his soul to save . . .
 As if his very soul were at a stand,
 Soothing her love-laden Soul in secret hour
 He speaks—the cold words flow not from his s.;
 Make thy gentle soul their pillow
 If the fainting soul is faintest
 The chains that bind this ruined soul . . .
 it vexes The very soul that the soul is gone a word which o'er the wurs Of the soul's giant has . . .
 O man! hold thee on in courage of soul . . .
 And the shadow that moves in the soul's eclipse
 Could medicine the sick soul to happy sleep . . .
 And little did the night disturb her soul— to her eyes The naked beauty of the soul lay bare, when death oppressed the weary soul, harmony became love In every soul but one . . .

Sound, n. (1) a concussion or vibration of the air affecting the organs of hearing.
 Every sight and sound from the vast earth at the sound he turned, Alastor, 69.
 with sound That shook the everlasting rocks,
 not a star shone, not a sound was heard;
 607
 What sound is that? Cenci, III. i. 68.
 Listen! What sound is that?
 in form, Sound, colour, Epips, 211.
 still, sweet spirit of that sound, 331.
 With ever-changing sound 431.
 Illuminating, with sound that never fails
 Harmonizing silence without a sound
 and the sound Of old forests echoing round,
 To the sound of air low-breathing and with the sound Startled oblivion,— no sound their falling gave;
 out of many a fit Of traced sound—
 Though the sound overpowers, Sing again,
 Or where with sound like many voices sweet,
 not a sound was heard;
 To its dire wanderings to adapt the sound
 yet sound to me none came, III vi. 4.
 we sped Towards the sound: III vi. 8. else came no sound From the wide multitude To hear one sound of many made, the secret sound Of hymns to truth and the cavern crackle With sound, Sudden was caught one universal sound, Bursts like one sound XII x. 2.
 on the sound Which issued there,
 the sound is following underground.
 now the sound fainter and fainter, Cotopaxi! hnd the sound
 with toil and sound Are born and die;
 Four forth the sound like enchanted wine,
 Even the blind worms seem to feel the sound.
 A ghastly life without a sound;
 Never such a sound before
 'Tis scarce like sound: I. 133.
 These solid mountains quiver with the sound
 And one sound, above, around,
 One sound beneath, around, above,
 In the sound has breathing kept;
 Mingled with love and then dissolved in sound.
 I listened through the night when s was none.
 Shall we pursue the sound? II. i. 92.
 The storm of sound is driven along,
 Hither the sound has borne us—
 While the sound whirs around, II. iii. 63.
 Into a sea profound, of ever-spreading sound: II. v. 84.

Out of the stream of sound. From, IV. 505.
 The stream of sound has ebbed away from us,
 An universal sound like words: Oh, list!
 Heard not an earthly sound, Q. Mab, I. 93.
 the faintest sound From time's light footfall, Thrill to the night, and vibrate to the sound;
 To shrink at every sound, IV. 161.
 earth shuddered at the sound: VII. 86.
 And light and sound ebbed from the earth,
 his men Sunk with the sound relaxedly;
 In which every sound, and odour, and beam,
 In an ocean of dreams without a sound;
 His breath was a chain which without a sound
 Light, sound, and motion own the potent sway,
 I see the light, and I hear the sound;
 with an earthquake of sound,
 The feeling and the sound are fled and gone, whose music was a storm Of sound, Woodman, 37.

(2) a particular manner of striking the ear so as to produce a certain effect.

 and the sound Of the sweet brook 477.
 Burst with earthquake sound, Calderon, II. 29.
 What sound is that? List! 'tis the tread of feet Except the mill-wheel's sound Cenci, IV. iii. 3.
 Hark! whence that rushing sound?
 There is many a mournful sound;
 A sound of song Eng. Hills, 61.
 nearer Now the sound of song Fansh, II. 53.
 A sweet and a creeping sound Fr. Salen, II. 56.
 With an inconstant and an idle sound,
 That seldom-heard mysterious sound,
 The sound As of the assault of an imperial city,
 What sound of the importunate earth 913.
 The sound of their oceans, the light of their sky, Whapt the great pile with glare and roaring s, the busy woodpecker Made stiller by her sound sound like delight broke forth and the far sound Of their nipping steps
 the chain, with sound Like earthquake, Which bears one sound of many voices past,
 as when the s Of whirlwind, V. vi. 2.
 the sound of sweeping conflict spread, the sound as of a spirit's tongue
 a sound arose like thunder
 Like sweetest sound, seeking its mate, it darts—

 The sound has poison in it, XV. 12.
 What wondrous sound is that, mournful and faint, they bear along with them The waning sound,
 a sound Of deep and fearful melody, 54.
 There rose to Heaven a sound of angry song,
 Insect, or beast, or shape or sound of life Prom. I. 22.
 I hear a sound of voices I. 112.
 The sound is of whirlwind underground,
 the shape is awful like the sound, I. 233.
 And first there comes a gentle sound, o'er the clear billows of sweet sound, II. ii. 48.
 Leaps in the mist with an awakening sound.
 Its sound must be at once both sweet and strange.
 When there was heard a sound, so loud,
 A long, long sound, as it would never end.
 Soon as the s had ceased whose thunder filled
 From the sound of our flight, IV. 145.
 What is that awful sound? IV. 185.
 The ocean-like enchantment of strong sound, Hark! whence that rushing sound? Q. Mab, I. 45.
 where to the sound Of the flesh-mangling scourge, Mixed with a sound of waters murmuring
 A sound from there, Rosalind dear,
 And the sound of her heart that ever beat Rosal. 63.
 The awful sound of my own voice 1149.
 Carles of life-dissolving sound, 1166.

As from a centre, dart thy spirit's light my spirit's bark is driven,
Spirit more vast than thou.
My faint s. was sitting in the light Of thy looks,
my Spirit Changed thoughts and woe Which tell me that the spirit weeps within
In his dark spirit from this act; I none.
once in . . . How the delighted s. pants for joy!
But who can flatter the dark spirit.
The subtle, pure, and inmost spirit of life!
Her spirit apprehends the sense of pain,
Who think man's spirit as a worm's,
The spirit which doth reign within these limbs and make your spirit glad.
Whose sleepless spirit wants to catch
How the lamenting spirit moans in it, and so My spirit wept,
Till by the spirit of the mighty dead
Napoleon's fierce spirit rolled,
Can break a spirit already more than bent.
My spirit should at first have worshipped thine, the spirit that creates One object,
a Being whom my spirit oft Met.
Her Spirit was the harmony of truth—
I was laid asleep, spirit and limb,
And called my Spirit.
we shall be one Spirit within two frames,
And my spirit which so long . . .
Draw thou His spirit from its springs;
The active spirit of man soon sleeps,
Cures him of spirits and the spirit together, ruling the motion Of his subjected spirit:
Come, thou awakener of the spirit's ocean,
My spirit like a charmed bark doth swim
Corruption from the spirit passing forth,
Why should not we rouse with the spirit's blast.
Make the delighted spirit glow,
A few, whose spirit is a chronicle.
O spirit of my woes! is it not come?
Wild, wilder thoughts convulse My spirit—
All things which make the spirit most elate,
when the will is powerless, and the spirit . . .
My spirit is too deeply laden which always makes the spirit tame.
Had struck, methinks, his eagle spirit blind might well have cast A darkness on my spirit—
How strong the chains are which our spirit bind;
O Thou, my spirit's mate . . .
the wrongs which break The spirit it expresses the hour which burst My spirit's sleep:
and my spirit sprung To meet thee
Or, must the lyre on which my spirit lingers Soon pause . . .
kindling beam Of love divine into my spirit sent,
and this lore did sway My spirit like a storm.
But from its beams deep love my spirit drank, did nurse my spirit's folded powers, my s. onward past Beneath truth's steady beams my spirit sought To weave a bondage Her spirit o'er the ocean's floating state what a spirit strong and mild, my spirit sought Why the deceiver and the slave from the crystal wells Of thy deep spirit, Where then my spirit dwelt—in its sinking gulphs my sickening spirit tost.
did my spirit wake From sleep,
his spirit thus became a lamp Of splendour,
His spirit leaped within his aged frame,
O'er many a mountain chain . . . my spirit bears
My frame; . . .
In whom its earliest hopes my spirit found;
I drank those hopes which make the spirit quail;
Came to my spirit in its solitude:
the dream for which my spirit yearned
My spirit felt again like one of those
My spirit moved upon the sea like wind
Was there a human spirit in the steed,
From spirit to spirit, from nation to nation,
The spirit dwelling there Was spell-bound.
His spirit basked in its internal flame,—
Which turns the gazer's spirit into stone; . . .

Yet in spirit oft I see . . .
For the very spirit fails,
Thou chosen sister of the spirit,
Moves the calm spirit, but disturbs it not.
And therefore did her spirit dimly feel Whit from the human spirit's deepest deep out of the inmost cave Of man's deep spirit, Within a cavern of man's trackless spirit . . .
Be thou, spirit fierce, My spirit!
Regrets which glide through the spirit's gloom,
Consume their spirit's oil?
What sadness made that vernal spirit were?
Though such were in his spirit,
A air of rest beneath thy spirit pare,
The spirit of Prince Athanasar,
How many a spirit then puts on Yet when the spirit flashed beneath . . .
Of which my spirit was a burning morrow—
Whose spells have stolen my spirit as I slept
And music lifted up the listening spirit . . .
Meanwhile thy spirit lifts its pinions . . .
Whose sleepless spirit waits to catch that the spirit clothed in its changeless purity, The chains . . . Fell from Ianthe's spirit; vainly strove To bind the impassive spirit;
the happy spirit contemplates its well-spent pilgrimage . . .
The joys which mingled sense and spirit yield.
The tranquil spirit failed beneath its grasp,
For birth but wakes the spirit . . .
a wound my spirit bore indignantly,
Among Heaven's winds my spirit once did move.
did dwell That spirit as it passed, . . .
Helen, whose spirit was of softer mould,
The spirit, that faded away with the breath . . .
I am the image of swift Plato's spirit, wear These heavy chains of life with a light spirit.
Flash from the spirit to the countenance
And stands before the spirit's inmost throne, the spark with which Heaven lit my spirit . . .
If Bacon's eagle spirit had not kept Where the spirit drinks till the brain is wild;
and will mould Thy growing spirit . . .
render No song when the spirit is mute:—
and let A living spirit within all its frame, in visions could not chum Her spirit;
ray Of thine own beauty from my spirit thrown.
(2) the active, vital, or essential part of anything.
The leprous corpse touched by this spirit tender
Armed to strike dead the spirit of the time, . . .
Against the spirit of life throne in the heart,—
Keep the fierce spirit of the hour at bay,
S. of Nature! here In this interminable wilderness Spirit of Nature! thou Imperishable . . .
A spirit of "gentle love beside me said;
Nought waits for the good, but a spirit of Love.
The spirit of the worm beneath the sod
the small, still, sweet spirit of that sound, Draw the last spirit of the age of gold,
Spirit of Contradiction!
The spirit of God with might unfaried
To Heaven shall her spirit ascend;
Spirit of Beauty, that dust consecrate
Whom, Spirit fair, thy spells did bind
The inmost pure spirit of light,
Thus evil triumphed, and the Spirit of evil,
And the great Spirit of Good did creep among soon the Spirit of Good,
O Spirit vast and deep as Night and Heaven!
Spirit of beauty! at whose soft command
The spirit of evil well may be:
as they gather The spirit of thy love
a spirit of keen joy!
Let thy malignant spirit move . . .
where my spirit Was panted forth in anguish
And the Spirit of Might,
A word for the Spirit of Wisdom to wield;
Spirit of Nature! no . . .
is active, living spirit.
is wide diffused A spirit of activity and life, Spirit of Nature! all-sufficing Power, rarely, comest thou, Spirit of Delight!
Spirit false! thou hast forgot
But above all other things, Spirit, I love thee:
For the spirit of life o'er every limb Lingered,
Like the Spirit of Love felt everywhere;
With a spirit of growth had been animated!
Rebuked the infant spirit of melody . . .
But still 'twas some s. of kindness descending Swiftly walk over the western wave S. of Night!
Shed thou once more the spirit of thy stream:
Vergil, 2.
(3) intelligence, disposition of mind.
the free spirit which first ordered them;
guided by my Spirit blind
A wandering and strange spirit.
Mark you what spirit sits in St. John's eyes?
grind The gentle spirit of our meek reviews
The spirit that lifts the slave before his lord
Thy spirit is present in the past, . . .

Star, n. A. Lit. popularly applied to any of the heavenly bodies except the sun, moon, and earth.

The soul of Adonais, like a star, some constant star between one foliage'd lattice
not a star Shone, not a sound was heard;
Peers like a star o'er ocean's A. L. edge, like a star In a sea of glassy weather.
The silver lightnings Of the evening star,
And thou Fair star,
When the morning star shines dead,
the destined Star has risen
Or an air-dissolved star
And that one star,
Which the keen evening star is shining through. Even. Pisa, IV. 6.
Children of a sunnier star,
he demands from Heaven its fairest star,
a fixed star gone astray
Like an unseen star of birth,
From which, bear 'th Heaven's fairest star,
Fled from the folding star of Bethlehem:
One star with insolent and victorious light
And follow Love's folding star
A blood red Comet and the Morning Star
when to the flood That fair Star fell, the Morning S. Shone thro' the woodbine wreaths The beams of that one Star did shoot and quiver his radiant brow did wear The Morning Star:
a bright Star did glow Before my steps—
I looked abroad, and saw a star
Cast from one cloudless star, twin phantoms of one star that lies move, though the star reposes, Guide us, as one clear star the seaman saves,
each plant, and star, and beast,
As if to some Elysian star.
As twilight to the western star,
when every star Spoke peace from heaven—
Who sittest in thy star, o'er Ocean's western floor,
A ship without needle or star;
The desire of the moth for the star,
Piercing the stormy darkness like a star,
Wraps thee as a star is wrapt in light.
A star has fallen upon the earth
Looks radiant as the air around a star.
Their soft smiles light the air like a star's fire,
Deeply in truth; but the eastern star looks white,
The point of one white star is quivering still for the Eastern star grew pale.
Or when some star of many a one Without a course, without a star,
With that white star, its sightless pilot's crest,
That sits i' the morning star.
A light, like a green star,
The loftiest star of unascended heaven,
star That gems the glittering coronet of morn,
Preps like a star o'er ocean's western edge,
As where the evening star may walk
one Star Had scarce burst forth,
And when the evening star came forth
Like the light of an unmeasured star.
The beams which dart from many a star
At night they were darkness no star could melt.
Like a star of heaven lovely star when morn has broke The roof of darkness,
Sweet star, which gleaming o'er the darkness
Sweet star! When wearied Nature
The star that ruled his doom
In that star's smile, whose light is like the accent Fiercely extolled the fortune of her star.
Methought a star came down from heaven,
Gazed like a star into the morning light.
Tell me, thou star, whose wings of light World's Wanderers, I. 1.
In many a mimic moon and bearded star
as the chariot of her star;
And sowed it in his mother's star,
Like a star up the torrent of the night,
Circling the image of a shooting star, till the star of dawn may fall
Of one serene and unapproached star.
Thou wert as a lone star, whose light did shine Veiled art thou like a star.
the star which panted In evening for the Day,
(2) the sun so called
The broad star Of day
(3) applied to the moon,
Were like the s. whose beams the waves compel

Strange, adj. (1) mysterious, wonderful.

Strange tears uniting with those breathless kisses, sweeping from some strange harp S. symphony, Sere'd by the autumn of strange suffering
To their strange light in many a dream with a doubtful smile mocking its own s. charma with a horror Thrilling and strange? Calderson, II. 171.
Some terrible and strange Peril is near.
But her own strange and uncomplaining wrongs?
I feel a giddy sickness of strange awe;
That some strange sudden death hang over him.
Wild, sweet, but inconceivably strange,
Yet both so passing strange and wonderful!
Draw that strange car of glory,
Strange things within their belted orbs appear.
and that strange state
The times do cast strange shadows
Of strange and secret and forgotten things
And what is strange, the author of this theft
That was most strange
And that strange boat, like the moon's shade and strange desire, The tempest of a passion, radiant self was shewn In this strange vision, to their mutual wars Strange truce, Strange panic first,
Which floated 'mid a strange and brilliant light;
the strange sleep
I seem as in a trance sublime and strange
Strange melody with love and awe
Follow the herbless banks of that strange brook
Like one who sees a strange phantasm
And the sweet, strange mystery
And yet a strange and horrid curse
What sorrow strange, and shadowy,
Strange truths and new to that experienced man;
I bear alone a strange load—
Terrible, strange, sublime and beauteous shapes.
Why have the secret powers of this strange world
With the strange might of unimagined pains
Of delicate strange tracery;
Even now have I begotten a strange wonder,
Strange combinations out of common things,
Its sound must be at once both sweet and strange.
Strange, savage, ghastly, dark and execrable, notes (Of that strange lyre whose strings
How strange a human pride!
Is it strange That thy poor wretch
Is it strange That, placed on a conspicuous throne
No—'tis not strange.
whisper'd strange tales in the whirlwind's ear.
and death, and that strange state
It's strange sustainer there had been.
Strange inmate of a living breast!
and of the strange Distinctions Burned in some strange talk.
All that is great and all that is strange a strange trance over my fancy grew yet it is strange that we,
Her cave was stored with scrolls of s. device,
Then by strange art she kneaded fire and snow
And then she had a charm of strange device, she gave Strange panacea in a crystal bowl—

(2) unusual, unaccustomed, peculiar, curious.

To seek strange truths in undiscovered lands and whatso'er of strange Sculptured the grave Were some strange joy for us.
Strange accents are ringing and other strange and dread Magical forms did not make More figures, or more strange;
The shock of crags shot from strange enginery, the double clank of footsteps strange were beguiled Into strange silence, whose strange melody Might not belong to earth.
A voyage divine and strange, and awful tale,
a strange and awful tale That Woman told,
And horned moons, and meteors strange and fair, makes appear Strange clouds in the east;
Into a fenn, by some strange misery:
a strange load my heart did bear,
a murmur strange Made as I past;
In their green eyes a strange disease did glow, or raving mad, did tell Strange truths;
A tumult of strange names, o'erthrown With strange and star-bright flowers, like boiling gold on Ocean, strange to see,
For ministrations strange and far;
our state Is strange and full of doubt and fear;
Of forms most beautiful and strange,
the sea Was lifted by strange tempest,

(3) extraordinary, extravagant.

But that the strange and execrable deeds
A wandering and strange spirit.
I have endured a wrong so great and strange,
And the strange horror of the strange tale,
they are unnatural, strange and monstrous,
Strange rain shall destroy both her and thee

She seems quite overdone with this strange horror. Cenci, IV. iv. 61.
It speaks of that strange horror
Strange thoughts begot strange deeds;
wrapt in a strange cloud of crime
Fancying strange comments in her dizzy brain
Strange as a dreamer's mad imaginings,
Like one who hears some strange absurdity.
An hundred tribes nourished on strange religions
May credit this strange sacrifice,
On the strange creeds priests hold so dear,
To strange distortion out of the hill side,
And she would write strange dreams

(4) singular, remarkable.

For strange to say, I feel my spirits fail
Of death and judgment with strange confidence
'Tis strange! There were clear marks of violence the strange madness Juno sent upon thee;
never think it strange That poets range
With strange contortions through the night, some machine portentous, or strange gin,
Some strange, all sudden, none dishonourable, voices (Of s. lament soothe my supreme repose,
But such a strain of wondrous, strange, untired,
'Tis strange men change not.
As snatched that strange vision, severeth filled the air With her strange name and mine,
With influence strange of mournfullest delight,
a strange tale of strange endurance,
Of that strange dungeon;
was happiest in that strange retreat,
From that most strange delusion Strange thoughts are mine—
And strange 'twas amid that hideous heap
Joined that strange dance
A vision strange such towers to see,
The world is full of strange delusion
Two visions of strange radiance float
A strange and woe-worn wight Arose mine own strange grief But seldom stoops and been deceived By some strange shew;
'Tis sure most strange
'Is it not strange, Isabel, said the youth,

(5) monstrous, outrageous.

confusion strange Of good and ill;
Strange fellowship through mutual hate had tied,
(6) unwonted, unusual.
The owls fly out in strange alflight;
and with s. skill Subdued the strong Latonian, wonder strange possessed The everlasting Gods
At first my peace was marred by this strange stir, (7) unexpected.

whom now strange meeting did befall and that strange lot, What'er it be,
The earth takes hues obscure and strange, bringing, ere evening, Strange night

(8) foreign, unknown.

meeting did befall In a strange land,
As famished mariners thro' strange seas gone pilot us thro' caverns strange and fair Bring home with you That sweet strange lady-friend.
Then I heard strange tongues,
Stole a strange seed,

(9) widely differing, motley.

And complicate strange webs
Strange natures made a brotherhood of ill
So on those strange and congregated hosts
And the strange crowd that out and in Pased,
Where Frost and Heat in strange embraces blend (10) vile, unaccustomed.

Till she will eat strange flesh

Strange, interj.

Thus I am answered: strange!

Strangely, adv. (1) curiously, singularly.

within these limbs Seems strangely undisturbed.
(2) in an unusual manner.
And strangely through the solid depth
(3) oddly, in a curious manner.
How strangely does a single blood-red line,
and still I think, But strangely,

(4) very greatly, to an unusual degree.

Your Sublime Highness is strangely moved.

Stranger, n. (1) a person unknown to, or not familiar with one personally sad Urania scanned The Stranger's mien, her very name, But spoken by a stranger,

She met me, Stranger, upon life's rough way,
Gorge from a s. hand, and rend their master.
A stranger could do little more
But me—whose heart a strange tear might wear
List, stranger, list, mine is an human form,
From many a stranger's eye would dart,
Yet if some stranger breathed that name,
But fairest stranger, when didst thou depart

Tale, n. A. Lit. (1) history or narrative relation.

To make these woe a tale for distant years:
like the tale Of old time, repeats again.
to borrow The love of truth from such a tale?
One mung of more who left the tale untold,
O, write no more the tale of Troy,
And told as she had heard the mournful tale.
a strange and awful tale That Woman told,
Thus the dark tale which history doth unfold,
the tale may not be said—
A tale of passionate change, divinely taught,
A tale of human power—
And in no careless heart transcribed the tale;
Some tale, or thine own fancies would engage a strange tale of strange endurance,
And still how popular the tale is here;
thou framedst A tale to suit thy dotage,
Thousands shall deem it an old woman's tale,
A fearful tale!
From the wrecks of a tale of wilder sorrow
Or if they listened to some tale—
she thus did keep The tenor of her tale:
my tale grows old With grief,
What is thy tale?
For but to see her were to read the tale
the pictured poetry Of some high tale—
A tale more fit for the weird winter nights,

(2) short narrative, declaration.
And the strange horror of the accuser's tale,
A brief but specious tale,
a plain tale on the other side.
Before the Angel had told his tale,

the violet tells her tale To the odour-scented gale.
Tell their own tale to him who wisely heeds
it stands to tell A melancholy tale,
The ceaseless generations tell their tale;
Thus tale it is that the nightingale—Was pausing in her heaven-taught tale:
Who telleth a tale of unspeaking death? There is no work, 25.

pathetic talk. And wit, and harmony
In silence which doth follow talk
And so we sat, until our talk befell talk that might dispart Time, Sweet talk, and smiles, and sighs, nor did he—Decline this talk:
sweet and subtle talk they evermore,
With which our pallid race hold ghastly talk.
To those in talk or slumber bound,
Thy simple talk once soled, now delights.
None talked that common, false, cold, hollow talk Till our mournful talk be done.
our talk was sad and sweet,
Yet o'er his talk, and looks, and mien,
With passionate talk wherever we might rove
Buried in some strange talk.

(2) matters, circumstances, occurrences.

Heartless things Are done and said I! the world,
In Nature's vast frame, the web of human things,
In things of great importance
I never ram to approach things of this sort,
I never thought the things you charge me with I none but those who dare All things—
Horrible things have been in this wild world,
You conjecture things too horrible To speak, Why—such things are All things Shall with a spirit of unnatural life Stir arming familiar things To the redress transmutes All t to guilt which is its nutriment, read the truth of things
And all the things hoped for or done therein
If all things then should be . . . my father's spirit,
How tedious, false and cold seem all things.
the voice Of these inexplicable things
thy song Flows on, and fills all t with melody—
All things are a pretence and boast.
I saw within the cave Horrible things;
All things are ready for you here;
And things divine are subject to her power.
From ruin of divinent things,
By the deep murmuring stream of passing things,

Thus human things are perfected,
I know That Love makes all things equal:
the heart Sees things unworthy;
Men must reap the things they sow,
All things in that sweet abode.
Yet all things far, and all things near,
There are few things that scandalize him not:
past like things Strange as a dreamer's while such things are,
Things wiser than were ever read in book,
Of strange and secret and forgotten things.
Over those strong and secret things and thoughts has care for meaneer t. Than thou canst dream,
They cast on all things sweetest, brightest, best,
Were there such things,
thou canst reach All things in thy wise spirit,
All things which make the spirit most elate,
true Vindications of remotest things.
And all things seem only one
Which seeks a 'soul of goodness' in things ill.
Two Powers o'er mortal things dominion hold
The darkness lingering o'er the dawn of things.
All symbols of things evil, all divine;
despair Of human, t, had made so dark and bare,
And wrinkled legends of unworthy things.
A sense of actual things those monstrous dreams among.

These things dwell in me,
Which once made all t subject to its power—things sudden shine To men's astonished eyes Eldest of things, divine Equality!
to be home of things immortal,
To the pure all things are pure!
into an instrument Of all things ill—
thus all things were Transformed has darted its lustre on all hidden things, reflects all meeting things that are,
from others who have known such things,
all things b e at rarest Are stamed;
or numbered not Among the things that are;
All loathliest things, even human flesh, lost To sense of outward things,
all mortal things are cold.
I speak of things which ye can apprehend.
reconciled To all things
Fill this dark night of things he sought, For his lost heart was tender, things to love.

And things are lost in the glare of day,
And thou shalt know of things unknown,
All who think those things untrue shook All human t, built in contempt of man,
The everlasting universe of things
With the clear universe of things around;
Ghosts of all things that are,
The secret strength of t. Which you as thought, the Power divine Which then lulled all things,
All earthly things that dare
He sees fair things in many hideous shapes, that by the inherent virtue Of these things,
Things being in this happy state,
And let things be as they have ever been;
human things Those may not know who cannot weep for them.

stamped on these lifeless things,
Fitting itself to all things well.
All things that Peter saw and felt had made alive The things it wrought on;
All things he seemed to understand,
Creeping like cold through all things near;
Which sweeps through all things.
Be as all things beneath the empyrean, Mine t
Worse things, unheard, unseen, remain behind.
And all best things are thus confused to ill.

let sense and thought Pass from our being,
or the speedier thoughts of man,
as thoughts and feeling Number delightful hours, Extinguishes all sense and thought, Charms every sense, and makes all thoughts take wing.
The source of human thought its tribute brings
The secret strength of things Which governs t, Like the man's thought dark in the infant's brain, power in thought be as the tree within the seed?
Rulers of eternal thought,
The strength of wealth or thought,
thought, pr reason, will, Imagination?
and speech created thought,
And your wings are soft and swift as thought,
Which whirl as the orb whirls, swifter than t, Twelve rovers with the impulse of thought
(4) the exercise of the mental faculty.
When lofty thought Lifts a young heart
In sweet oblivion of all thought,
That the tyrant of my thought thought is but a prelude to the deed—the blot Upon my fame vanish in idle thought, How slow Behind the course of thought,
made me look Upon the monster of my thought;
The mighty tide of thought,
For the brief fathom-line of thought until thought's melody Become too sweet Where busy thought and blind sensation mingle;
an image of the thought, Which, like a prophet in our night Of thought we know
From the fine threads of rare and subtle t—
Those deepest wells of passion or of thought
To echo all harmonious thought,
A life of unsummed thought which pierces
But raised above thy fellow men By thought, did I with earnest thought Heap knowledge Suspending thought and breath;
and thought did keep in dream,
When those soft eyes of scarcely conscious t,
The roof of such intelligible thought,
In secret thought has veiled another's ill—hated the clear light Of wisdom and free thought, Perchance no t can count them, yet they pass,
That we will be dread thought beneath thy beam,
the thought Which pierces this dark universe
Hence will and thought and action,
And t, to the world's dim boundaries clinging,
(5) imagination, conception, feeling.
All he had loved, and moulded into thought, thrones, built beyond mortal thought,
And he is gathered to the kings of thought let no tear Be shed—not even in thought, presented to thy thought As object of desire, Fear not to speak your thought,
the sweet stream of thought that with wild motion
Till those bright plumes of thought,
The shadow of that idol of my thought,
Scorn not these flowers of thought,
No thought can trace!
Thought is its cradle and its grave,
Of human thought or form,
and the swift t, Winging itself with laughter, Paintings, the poetry of mightiest thought,
Fairer than tongue can speak or t may frame, Framed a dark dwelling for their homeless t, thought could not divide The actual world
Such as self-torturing t from madness breeds?
from thought all glorious forms shall call These words, as they were woven, of my thought;
Sweet strains of sunny thought,
And thought erect an universal throne,
A thought of voiceless depth;
from the very wound of tender t. Drew solace, Science, Poetry and Thought Are thy lamps;
and thought no more can trace;
was clear As in the sculptor's thought; Wakening a sort of thought in sense.
For in his thought he visited
'Tis a vain thought, and they fed From the same flowers of thought,
Like a poet hidden In the light of thought,
Our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thought.
(6) an idea, a thing thought of.
Swift as a Thought by the snake Memory stung,
Then melancholy thought,
Called by the thought which tyrannizes thee
As if one thought were over strong for you
What hideous thought was that I had even now?
Horrible thought!
It was a wicked thought,
O, what a thought!
O, trample out that thought!
never think a thought unkind
You speak the image of my thought,
Thy lightest thought is my eternal law.
Then a divine thought came to me.
A sweet thought, which was once the life within

The thunder and the hiss of homeless streams
It bursts on the roof like the thunder's roar,
And earthquake and thunder Did rend
The thunder is knelling
Then wind and thunder,
Heaven's thunder to our harm;
And laugh as I pass in thunder.
In a cave under is fettered the thunder,
Rumbling the thunder of high heaven.
Flames before the thunder's way;
The thunder is tolling,
The interrupted thunder howls;
The thunder as of earthquake coming.
whose fierce delight is thunder— one blast of muttering thunder Burst in far peals Shook with the sulken thunder,
a sound arose like thunder.
as with a blast Of subterranean thunder Plead, loud as thunder, at Destruction's throne.
Pour from thy cloud-furn'd hills the thunder roar
And his rider howls in the thunder's roar.
More distinct than the thunder's wildest roar.
And speak in thunder to the sky,
Its thunder made the cataracts dumb;
And through thunder and darkness dread
Swifter than the thunder fell To the heart of Earth,
As thunder, louder than your own, nor had thunder, Nor yon volcano's until his thunder chained thee here,
How fearfully God's thunder howls behind!
I heard the thunder hoarsely laugh:
it shall be As thunder mingled with clear echoes;
With the thunder of gladness,
With thunder, and with whirlwind, the deep roar Of distant thunder.
Above me, the crash of the thunder was rolling,
And louder peal'd the thunder.

How I braved death for liberty and truth,
 Beneath t, steady beams upon its tumult cast.
 A minister of t, these plumes young Laon bore.
 O'er heralds no divine of truth's arising day,
 In life and truth, Might not my heart its cravings ever slake? — Laon, l. xlv. 6.
 and every tongue Was as a sword of truth— While slowly truth on thy benighted sense Has crept: — Laon, l. xlv. 7.
 to unfold Truth to my countrymen;
 and make Her the law of t, and freedom hear,
 that maiden who had reared The torch of T, afar, cævious tongues had stained his spotless truth,
 Around your tents truth's freedom to bestow,
 The token flowers of truth and freedom fair,
 Justice, and truth, and time, — Laon, l. xlv. 8.
 Tho' truth and virtue arm their hearts avail To hide the orb of truth— Justice, or truth, or joy! — Laon, l. xlv. 9.
 the shades approve His truth,
 the lore of truth in hues of flame Arrayed,
 They said that age was truth,
 Which rolls from steadfast truth as an unreturning stream. — Laon, l. xlv. 10.
T, deathless gems to thoughts remotest caves?
 All hope, or love, or truth, or liberty, doomed for truth to share The murderer's cell,
 Men shall learn truth, — Laon, l. xlv. 11.
T, trampled, Nature's landmarks overthrown,
 Freight with t, even from the throne of God:
Truth's brightest beam. — Laon, l. xlv. 12.
Shone truth upon Zonosar:
Her quenchless words, sparks of immortal t,
Withering up truth, peace, and pity. — Laon, l. xlv. 13.
As with one voice, Truth, liberty, and love!
And call truth, virtue, love, genius, or joy,
Riper in truth and virtuous daring grow?
Virtue and wisdom, truth and liberty, Fled, unprofitable As that of truth is now. — Laon, l. xlv. 14.
Base of all genius, virtue, freedom, truth,
hence truth and falsehood spring: — Laon, l. xlv. 15.
Honour sits smiling at the sale of truth.
Science and truth, and virtue's dreadful tone,
a glare that fades before the sun Of truth, uprooting every germ Of truth,
he taught them justice, truth, and peace, with the blood Of truth and freedom throne Of truth, and stubborn virtue, Inscapable to courage, truth, or love,
nor truth till late Avail'd to arrest its progress, from its dark mine drags the gem of truth
When truth and love shall dwell below sun-like truth Flashed on his visionary youth, Which mortals truth and reason deem,
If tenderness and truth could last Or live, visions clear Of deep affection and of t, sincere.
Songs consecrate to truth and liberty, — Laon, l. xlv. 16.

(2) fact, reality, verity.
 To speak truth, Livia is she
 It is a hidden truth Which I must fathom.
 God, who had be-held the truth,
 Pervert not truth Orano. — Cenci, l. ii. 1.
 To witness that I speak the sober truth;
 For then if this be truth,
 Must be a truth, a firm enduring truth, stumbling, in our talk, Over the truth, yet far less than the truth.
 Too like the truth of day.
 Now they suspect the truth;
 how well the supine slaves . . . read the truth of things — Laon, l. xlv. 17.
 And yet, confess the truth,
 Speak truth and the whole truth.
 This sounds as bad as truth.
 'twas torture forced the truth.
 It was that horrid torture forced the truth.
 Let tortures strain the truth till it be white I'll wring the t. Out of those nerves and sinews,
 They will tear the truth Even from thee
 O, speak the truth! — Laon, l. xlv. 18.
 There is no word of truth in what he says,
 And preming the truth of visioned bliss.
 Still there was truth in the sad oracle.
 I have heard . . . this joyous truth averred.
 This truth is the deep well.
 To borrow The lore of truth from such a tale?
 And where is truth? On tombs?
 where life, and truth, and joy Are swallowed up under With earnest willingness the t they know:
 And the cold truth such sad reverse did seem,
 he only weeps. . . that the truth is known;
 The truth now came upon me,
 I trembled, for the truth was known, in the truth Within your soul?
 one truth their dreary prison has shaken,
 they knew the truth,
 Like lurs who tell the truth to serve their ends,
 a lyve His Majesty to investigate their truth,
 This was the shadow of the truth I saw.
 till some great truth be loosened,
 Found the truth—
Laon, l. xlv. 19.

from two shrines Two armies shall obtain . . . — I. 139.

Two armies shall obtain the assurance two contending wills can never lead which of the two Will remain conqueror?
 And in whatever persons, one or two,
 From one effect two vengeance.
 Be silent, fellows! What! two friends
Two lives, the honour of their country?
 when two men of honour take the field,
two long years are past Since, on an April midnight,
 And we have pledged a health or two together,
 That he would grant a wish for his two sons,
Two yet remain, His wife remains and I,
 Nor those two most unnatural sons,
Two know two dull, fierce outlaws,
Two miles on this side of the fort,
 Blending two beams of one eternity two flames, oh! wherefore two?
 Till like two meteors of expanding flame,
 One hope within two wills,
 one will beneath Two overshadowing minds,
 These are two friends whose lives were undivided;
 For their two hearts in life were single-hearted.
 Where two fair apples with their gleam like two flowers Upon one stem,
 And saw two hosts conflicting in the air, he saw two adverse fleets Stalk through the night
 And two the loftiest of our ships of war,
 As of two mountains in the wall of Stamboul;
 began to fall Two years from my departure,
 And from the side two gentle bales are born
Two tranquil stars, while clouds are passing by
Two Powers o'er mortal things dominion hold
 O'er the wide wild abyss two meteors shone,
 Then first, two glittering lights were seen
Two mighty Spirits now return,
 Like two dark serpents tangled in the dust,
 day and night we two were ne'er Parted, two warring winds Involve in fire
Two hours, whose mighty circle did embrace
Two days thus past
 Yet two visions burst That darkness—as might befall Two disunited spirits Which blend two restless frames and now two days were gone Once fed two babes—a sister and a brother—two slaves he to her chamber sent,
Two gentle sisters mourn their desolation;
 suspended Between two h'aven's,
Two years of speechless bliss are gone,
Two mighty cities shone,
 On two dread mountains, from whose crest,
Two flames that each with quivering tongue
 A plane of light between two Heavens of azure:
 Between two parties who will govern you
 A winter or two—not more—
 I see two livid flames,
 A spot or two on me would do no harm,
Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
 Peter B-lis, one two and three,
 As the mean of two extremes—
 His eyes grew like two stars for bliss:
 There are two fountains in which spirits weep
two Destinies Filled each their irrevocable urns;
 For know there are two worlds of life and death:
 There are two woes; Behold'st thou not two shapes from the east and west
 Come, as two doves to one beloved nest,
 Then two dreams came.
 Contracted to two circles
 even Then two mighty spirits,
 I saw two azure halcyons clinging downward
 But see where through two openings in the forest
 And where two tunnels of a rivulet,
Two visions of strange radiance float
two eyes are heavens Of liquid darkness,
 Has led two hosts of dopes to battle-field,
 And my two wild boys would near my knee Cling
Two shapes of gladness to my sight;
Two other babes, delightful more Sate my two younger babes at play,
 Which, like two strains of harmony
 they are two wells Of liquid love:
 In her half-eaten eyeballs two pale flames appear'd,
 And how we ought, two hours before,
 Till like two clouds into one vale impelled Ikt. two rocks, athwart the rising moon,
 I saw two little dark-green leaves
 but two, which move, And form all others,
Two openings of unfathomable night
 From its smooth shoulders hung two rapid wings,
 Here lay two sister twins in infancy;
 Within, two lovers linked innocently

(2) adj. absol.
 I see the gulph Of Hell, between us two,
 Would we two had been twins
 We two will rise, and sit, compact 'twixt us two shall be.

I spread This veil between us two,
 and the two who stood beneath that night,
 With beams of golden shells we two did play,
 Lo! we two are here—
 The while we two, beloved, must depart,
 We two will sink on the wide waves of ruin,
 I have already dedicated two.
 how oft we two Have sate together
 There sit between us two, thou dearest—
Two by two, adv. phr.
 and two by two, He tossed them human hearts to chew

War and Earthquake, never light Upon its mountain-peaks;
 And war's mad fends the scene environ,
 With poisonous war to taint the air;
 And her slow dogs of war, Flashed with the chase,
 And Panic, shall wage war upon our side!
 They grappled in the embrace of war.
 To dwell with War, with us, and with Despair.
 After the war is fought, yield the sleek Russian
 And two the loftiest of our ships of war,
 Are Built below the tide of war, has cast himself beneath the stream of war.
 Yon cloud of war, with its tempestuous phantoms Fierce war and mingling combat, trampled in treacherous war The gentle hearts now the line Of war extended,
 And this was thine, O War!
 With War, and Woe, and Terror, in his train;
 On wealth, and war, and fraud—
 Where the flag of war unfurled
 Lift not your hands in the banded war,
 Starvation, typhus-fever, war, nor prison—
 Beotia, choose reform or civil war!
 Seeking peace, finding war—
 Thebes, choose reform or civil war, misery and confusion Of an unjust war,
 and War shall hover Above,
 It rapt us from red gulphs of war.
 The erring nations round to mutual war,
 They rushed to war,
 Wakes the unholy song of war,
 From kings, and priests, and statesmen, war arose,
War is the statesman's game,
 The ruin, the disgrace, the woe of war.
War with its million horrors,
 Then preaching peace, as now they practise war, and war, Scarce satiable by fate's last death-

 an eternal war to wage With tyranny . . .
 worth your friendship heed the war Of worms?
 who hear the war Of winds, and sigh,
 For ever, as the war became more fierce
 All thoughts within his mind waged mutual war, with that Friend of blood Renewed the doubtful war—
 with Custom's hydra brood, Wage silent war; Waged thro' that silent throng; a war that never failed! . . .
 the surprise And war of earthly minds, . . .
 Still secure 'mid the wildest war of the sky, things whose nature is at war with life—and make War for thy beloved sake . . .
 Weapons of an unvanquished war,
 And there was war among them, when tempest's war is leved o'er earth and sea its blast of war, which leved mutual war,
 rises not in war Against a king's employ?
 perceive that war Is discord, war, and misery;
